

Gerard Reinmuth, Scott Balmforth, Richard Blythe (Terrior)

Bispebjerg Hospital

2015 | Terrior

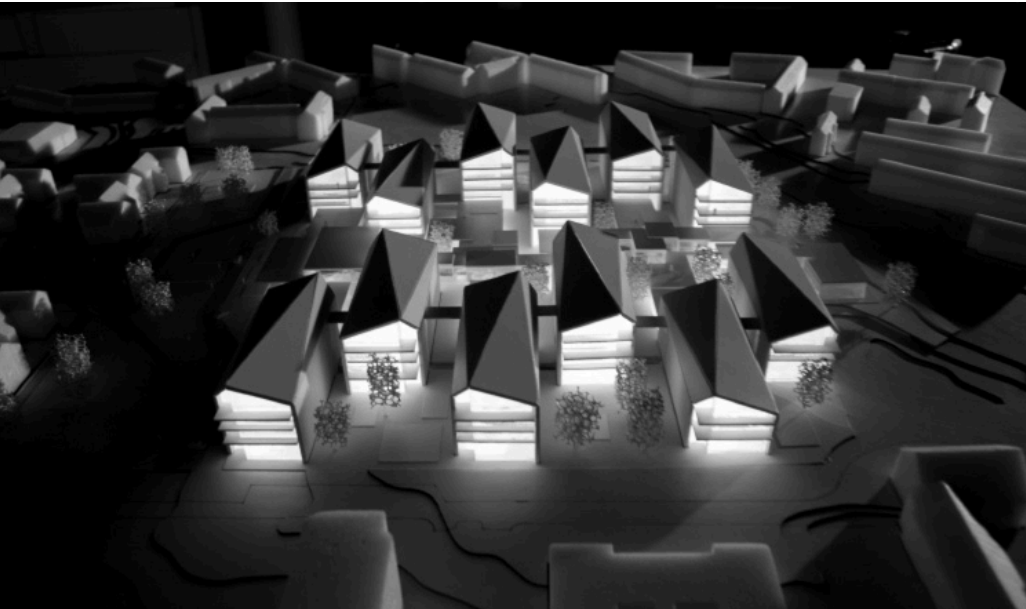

FoR: 1201

Output Category: Architectural Design

This project is a major somatic hospital, located in and around an important heritage site in Copenhagen. The significance of the project lies in solving highly complex functional and organisational problems within an extremely sensitive context. In particular, the creation of bed wards that respond spatially to the larger urban grain yet still serve hospital metrics and also clinical needs in terms of servicing, access and proximity to diagnostic centres.

This project is a major somatic hospital, located in and around an important heritage site in Copenhagen. The significance of the project lies in solving highly complex functional and organisational problems within an extremely sensitive context. In particular, the creation of bed wards that respond spatially to the larger urban grain yet still serve hospital metrics and also clinical needs in terms of servicing, access and proximity to diagnostic centres.

Images: Bispebjerg Hospital (DK)